

Home

On initial start up, the home screen will default to showing Gin. Once opened, it shows what was last played.

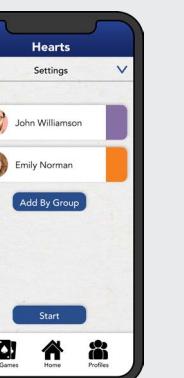

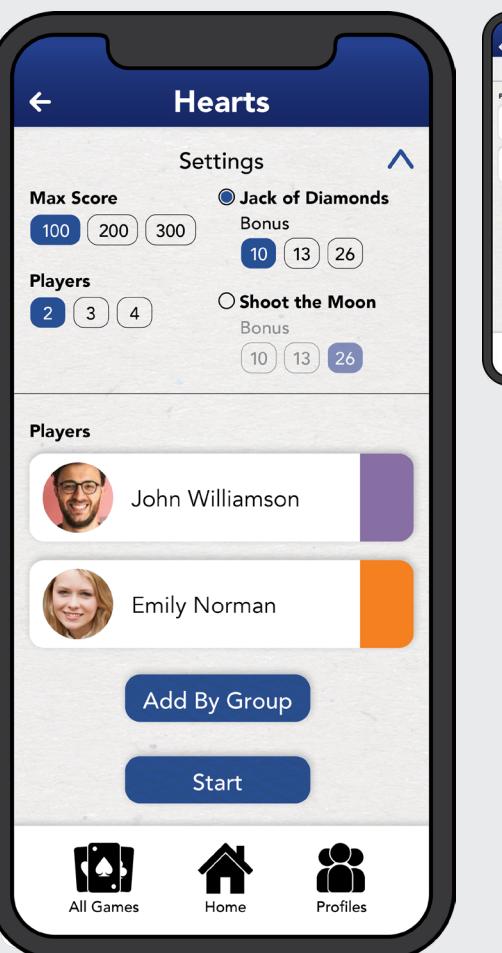

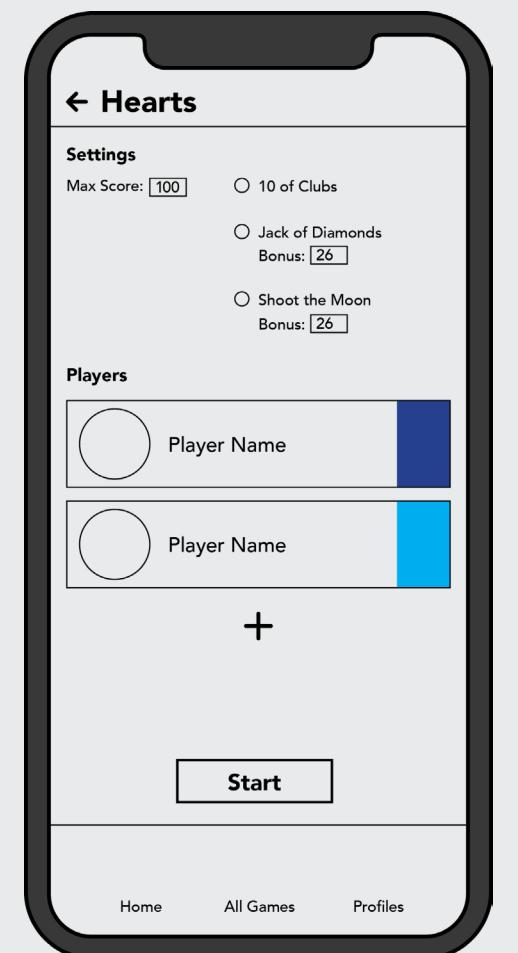

The entire screen (minus the tab bar) swipes to show other games.

New Game and Continue buttons are bound to the background, so will move with swiping movement. Continue button only appears when there is a game in progress.

Settings

Settings automatically opens in a new game. This initial pop-up shows the screen on the left.
In the game, one can open settings, but if points have been scored, it becomes the right screen, which is un-editable.

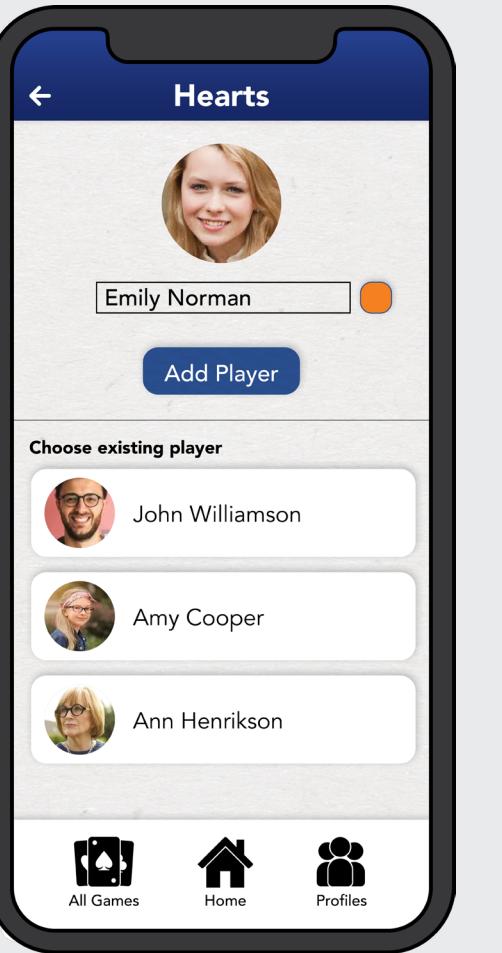

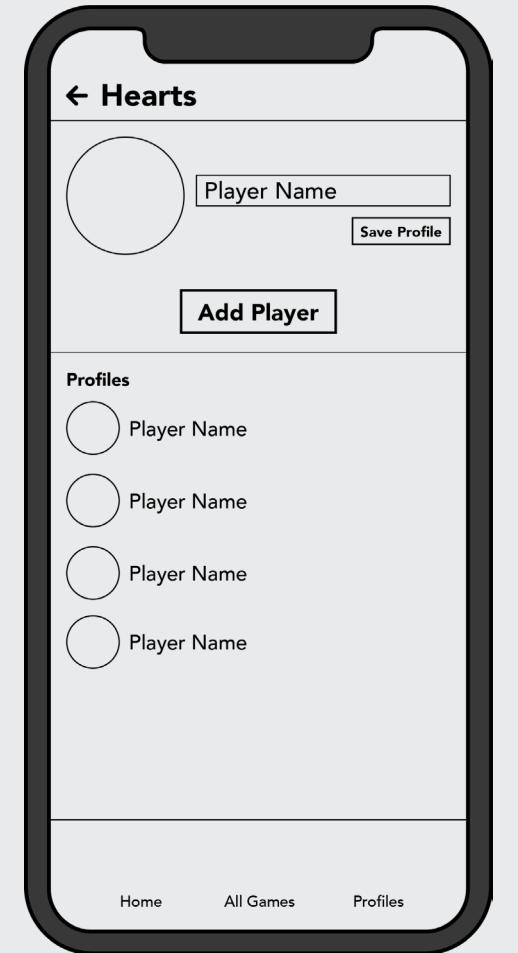

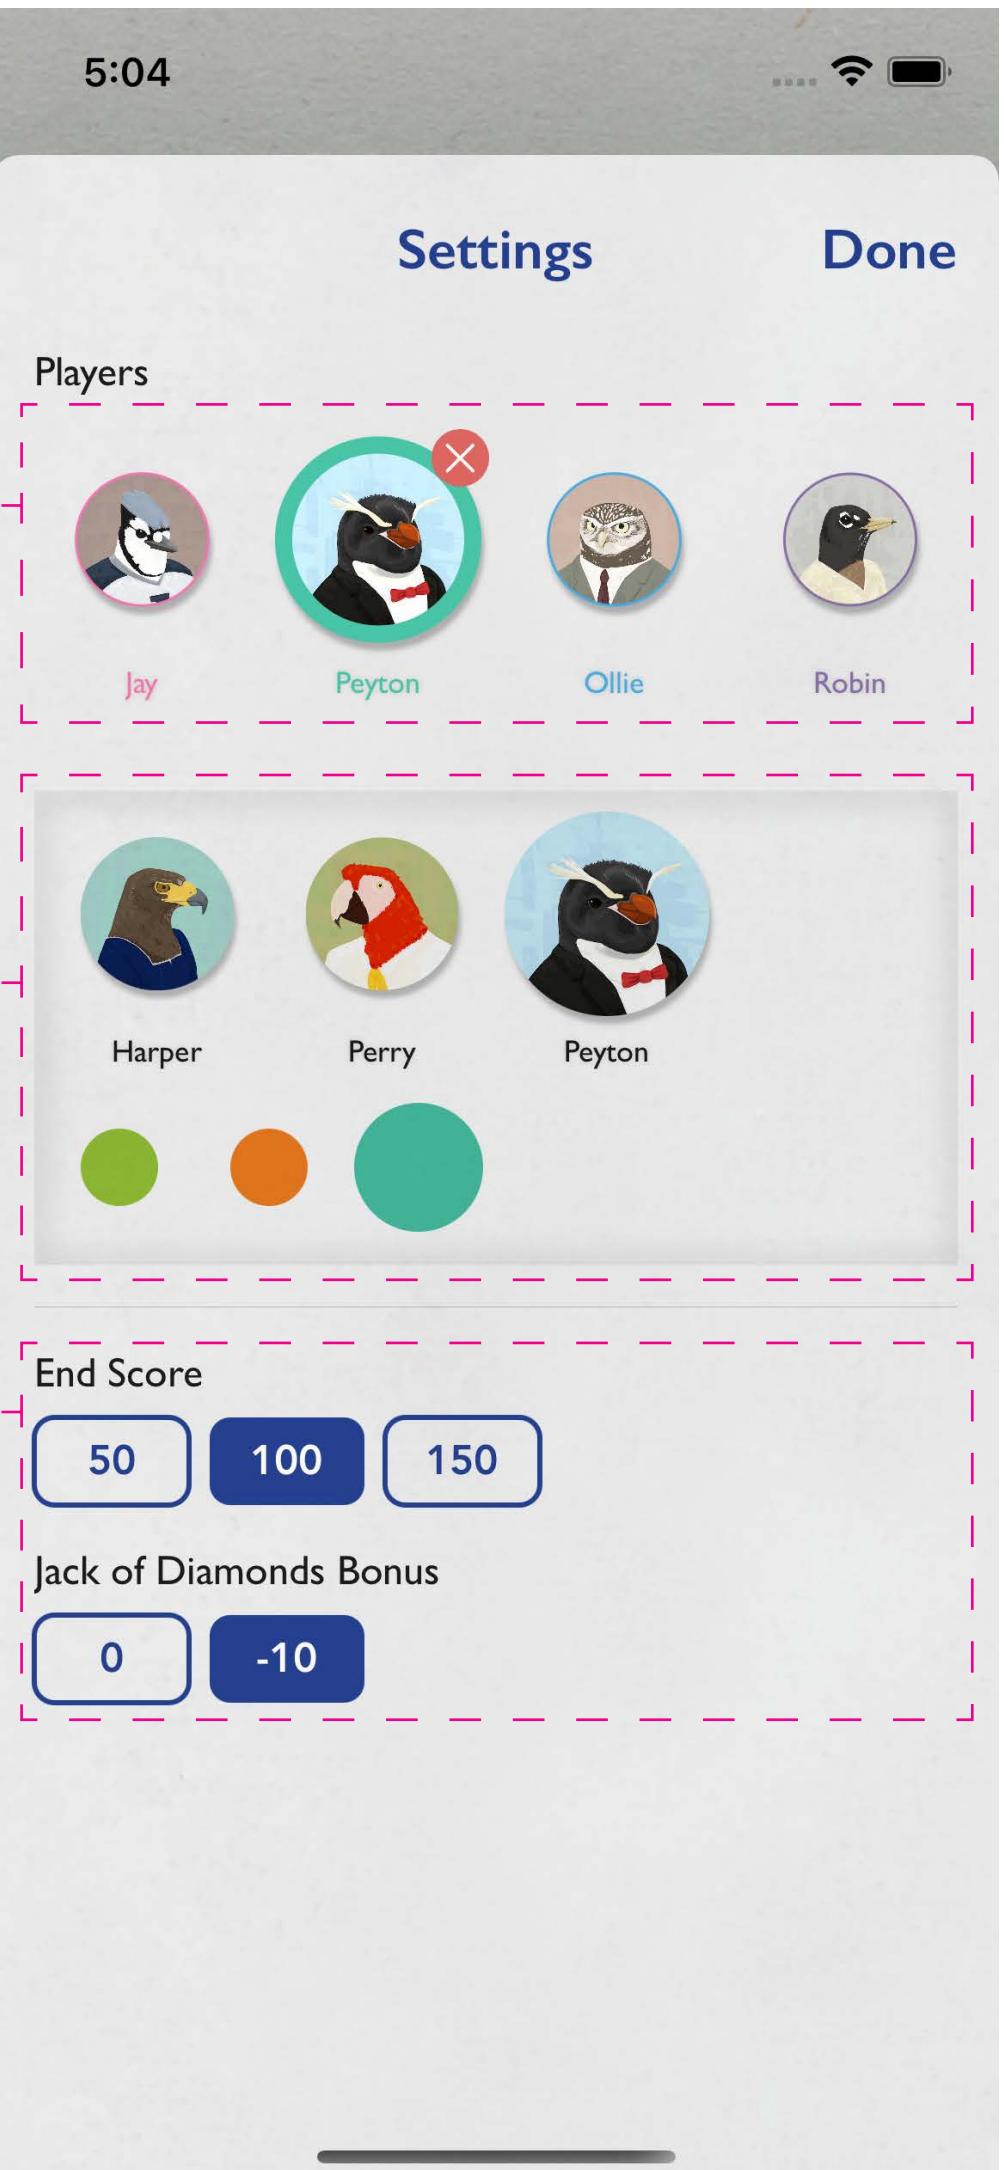

Players are initially seen with normal portraits, but when clicked, show selected and unselected states.

The ability to remove a player is only available for games that allow it.

When a player is selected, this window appears. On the top are all non-selected players. Below are non-selected colors.

While the color selections will remain the same or similar, the selection of players will change when permanent players are introduced.

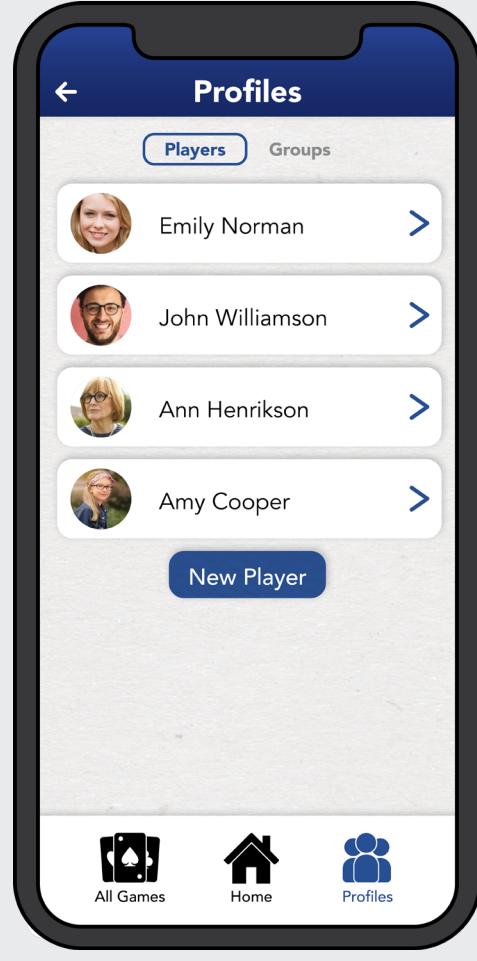

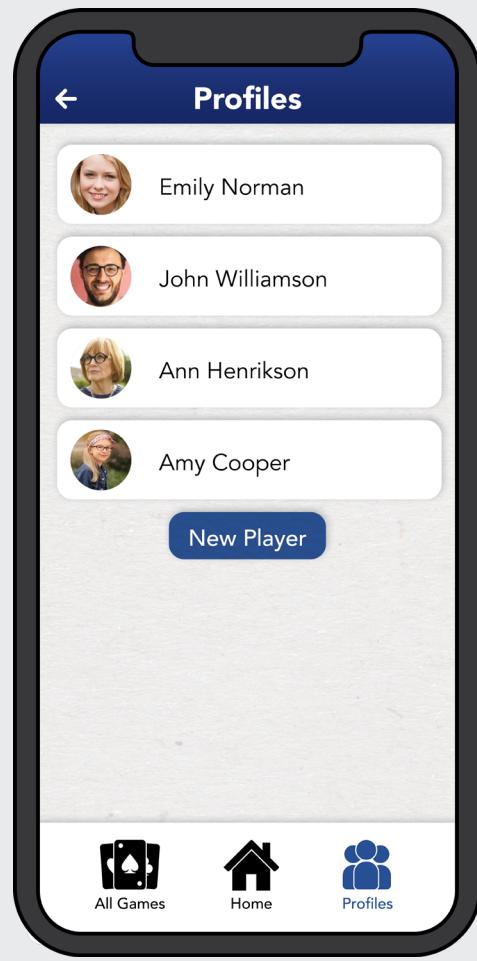

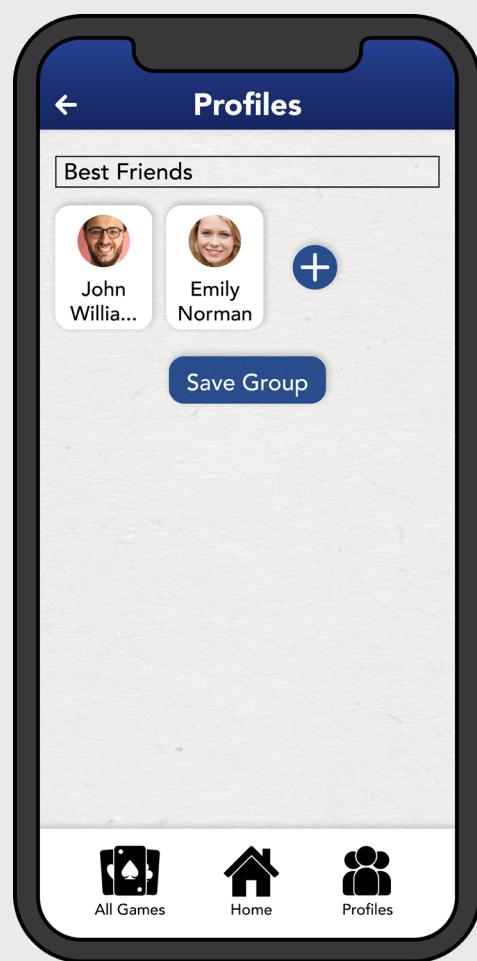

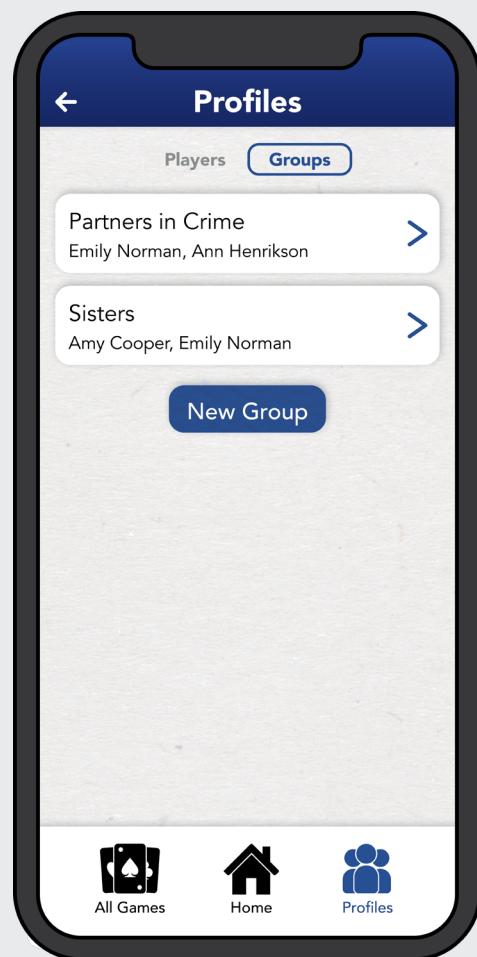

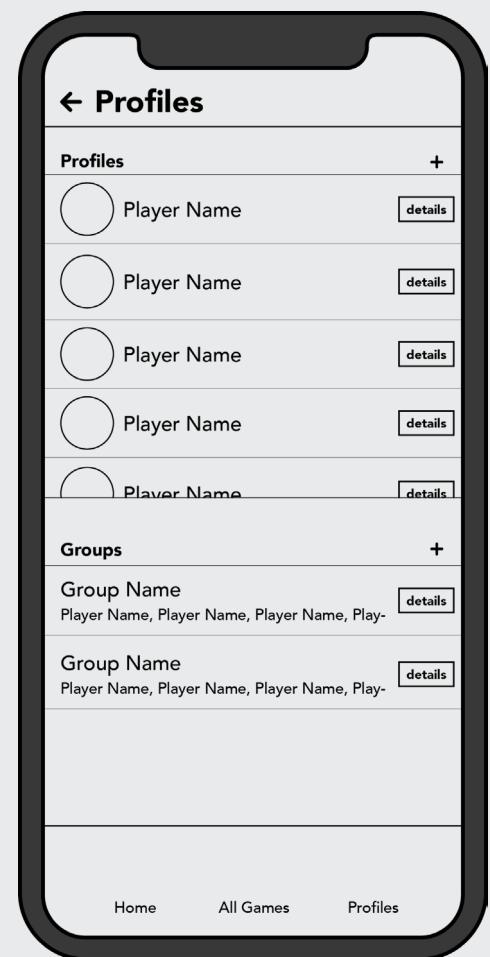

This section handles all the game-specific setting options.

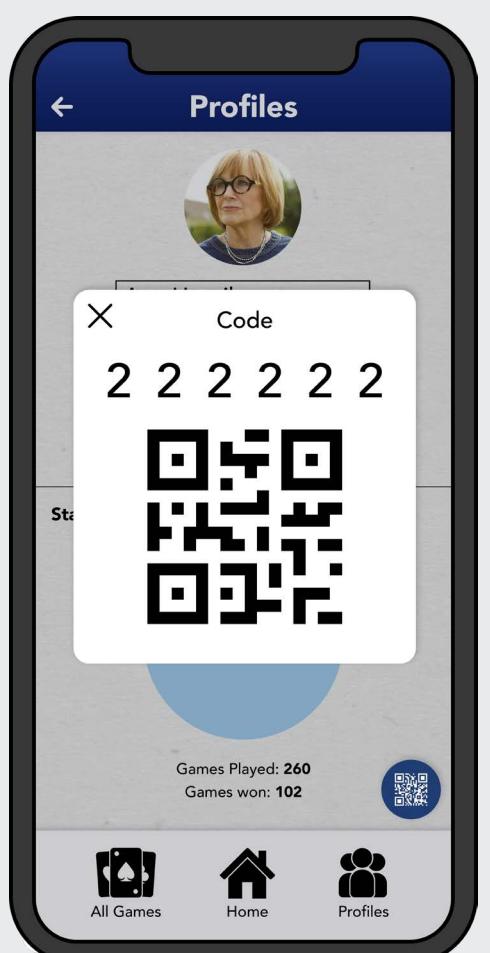

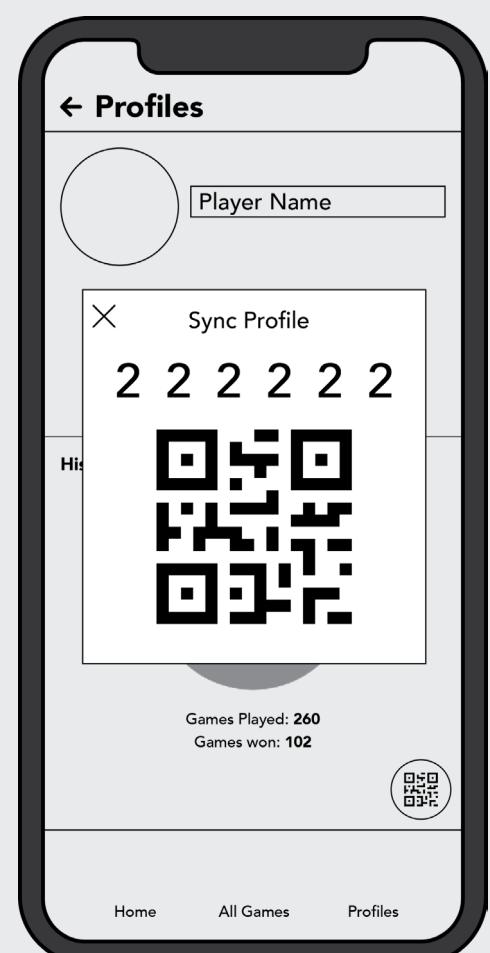

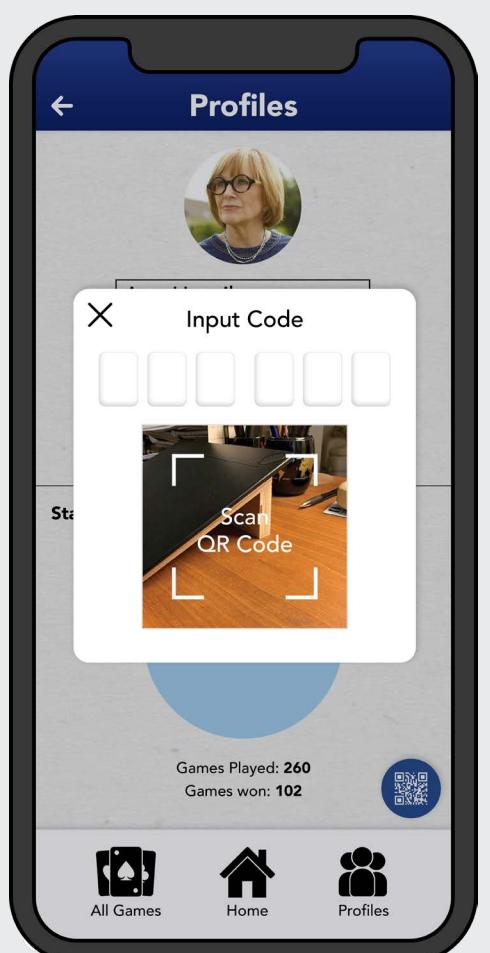

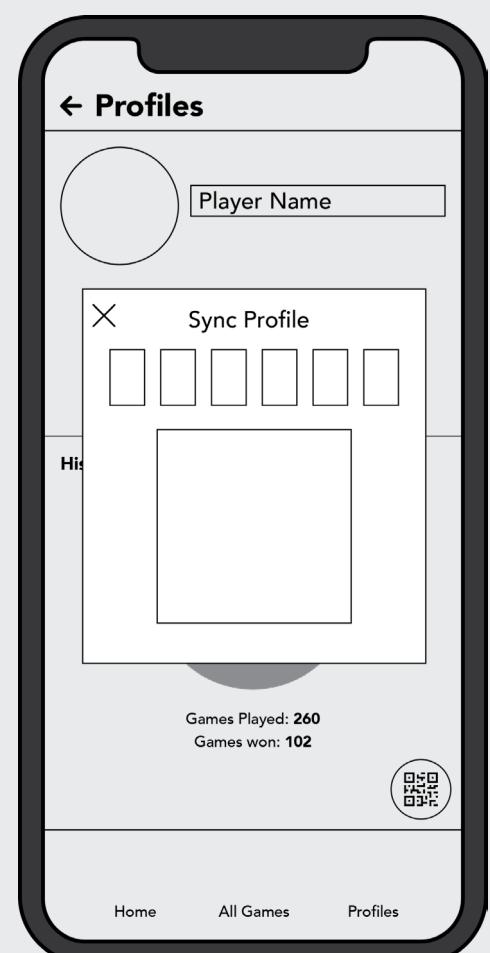

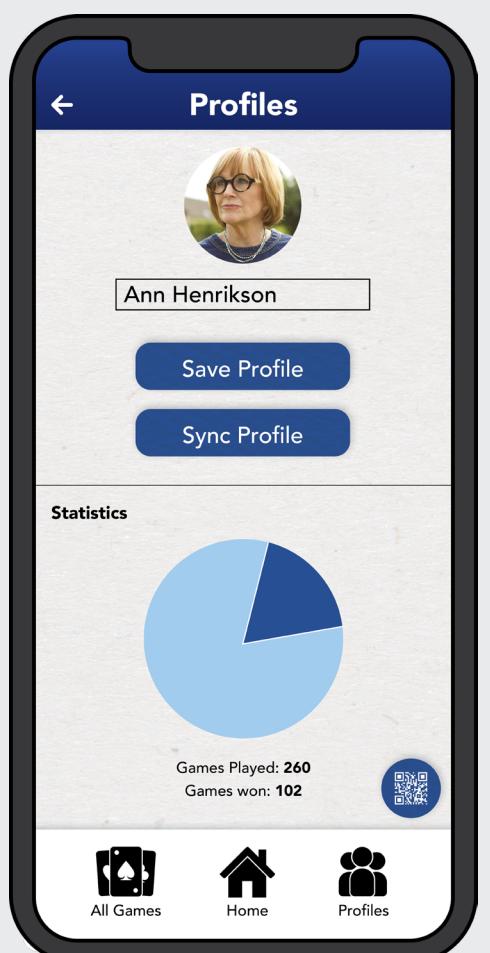

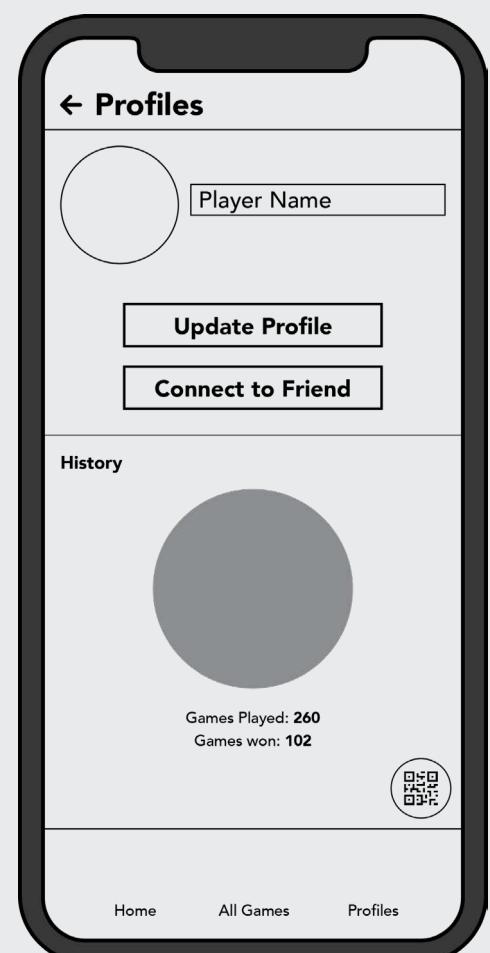

Players are not shown in the mid-game settings as they are shown in the actual game.

All other settings are disabled once points have been scored.
